King County Republican Picnic

Bothell, WA • August 12, 2006

King County
Elections

Every August, the King County Republican Picnic is held at the Freed Farm in Bothell to bring Republicans and their families from all over the county together. Many Republican candidates use the picnic to meet valuable constituents that may be able to assist them in their campaign efforts.

The King County Elections Outreach Team answered questions and updated voter registrations. Interest was very high in the accessible voting unit (AVU) and picnic attendees were eager to cast their sample ballot and learn more about the security measures in place.

Voters at this event expressed their continued interest in voting at the polls and were encouraged with the idea of regional voting centers.

The Outreach Team registered two new voters and 12 demonstration ballots were cast on the AVU.
